

ABSTRACT

A system, method and computer program product are provided for capturing and selectively analyzing data frames transmitted between stations in a communications network utilizing tunneling protocols. A connection is established with a communications network. Then, data frames are received in real-time, where the data frames are communicated utilizing tunneling. Such data frames that are communicated utilizing tunneling are subsequently analyzed.